Study Habits and Homework for Success

Many of the issues concerning success in school revolve around developing good study habits and homework expectations. Parents can play a major role in providing the encouragement, environment, and materials necessary for successful studying to take place. Some general things adults can do, include:

- Establish a routine for meals, bedtime and study/homework
- Provide books, supplies, and a special place for studying
- Encourage the child to "ready" himself for studying (refocus attention and relax)
- Offer to study with the child periodically (call out spelling words or do flash cards)

An established study routine is very important, especially for younger school age children. If a child knows, for example, that he is expected to do homework immediately after supper prior to watching television, he will be better able to adjust and ready himself than if he is allowed to do homework any time he pleases.

All children need their own place at home to do homework. The space does not need to be big or fancy, but it needs to be personal so that they feel it is their "study place."

Remember, learning styles differ from child to child, so the study place should allow for these differences. Parents can take a walk through the house with their child to find that special corner that is just right.
